lives Von Dina Bushrod In this first book in the series Alpha's in the Wild, "Hello Darkness," a woman in charge of a crew for the Park Service, she's been used and abused by the last man in her life. She's moved on and is stronger for it. Ready for a new assignment to prove herself, but as can happen, her pass gets in the way. An old love comes back, one that hurt her badly but has a story to tell her why. Her new assignment takes her to the backwoods to find her crew and get a job done. Then things get really strange; if she didn't know better she'd swear evil was out to get her. This is my first read that has a native American in it and it's not always good thing in this story. We have a story of the strength of love no matter how much time has passed and the obsessive madness of not letting go due to hate. I recommend this first of three stories in this series of strong Alpha women. Now to get to the second book so I can let you know if its a thumbs up like this first one was. Well the mountain climbing background in this second book of the series, Alpine Attraction, was something knew for me. The alpha in this story is Tina and seven years earlier while climbing solo in the Andes she was on the brink of losing her life when unexpected help came. But in order to be saved she had to swear to come back in seven years. The experience changed her life; even leaving a good man, Craig, who loved her. We go forward and she is horrifically reminded that the seven years is almost up. This time she knows better than to go alone, and learns that Craig is taking an expedition up the same mountain and signs on as his medic. This story puts you right there with her as she once again is climbing the mountain. We feel her strength and independence mixed in with fear of the unknown. I recommend this story to anyone interested in native legends, magic, courage, and love. When you finish you'll either want to find a mountain to climb or get as far away from them as you can. Wow !! At heart I'm a sci-fi nerd and this third book in the Alpha's in the Wild Series, "Run for Her Money" fits in that genre, along with adventure, thrills, surprising twists, strong characters, sexy love, and a dog; LOVED it. What starts out as a routine park ranger mission, turns into a struggle for survival as Sara discovers that something terrible has happened. At the same time a backpacker is trying desperately to get to a safe haven after evading detection from what seems to be some kind of attack. You'll have to read this story to learn what transpires when these two meet and what they have to go through to survive and learn what has happened. They meet other survivors and what follows next, well all I can say is I want this made into a movie. Get the collection, get them separately, but get these books and you will love reading about these Alpha women and what they go through to make it to a new and better day. 0 von 0 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. A collection of myth, legend and native culture set in the mounmtains with strong characters Von Jane Pike This is a set of some shorter stories that are based on myth, legend and native culture and therefore really interesting in the interpretation. Ann did a great job of coming up with these stories. In Hello Darkness Moira runs into her first love, exactly when she is heartbroken from her cheating husband and unprepared for the meeting. The man that had hurt her badly in the past is now a local doctor. Moira is on a trip as park ranger and stumbles again over him, while she has the feeling that her husband, a native shaman, is out to harm her, but she cant see him. Trapped in the mountains they need to figure everything out. In Alpine Attraction Tina made a long time ago a bargain with a being as she was in a precarious situation in the mountains and now when she had nearly forgotten about it and felt safe, that creature comes back, into her home, reminding her about the toll that she has to pay. Tina had pushed Craig, her former fianc, out of her life after that event in the mountains, now she wants a last chance to spend some time with him and also to have him, her best friend, at her side when she has to face her destiny. Can they make things right, can they escape this mountain spirit alive? In A Run For Her Money Sara is on a routine park ranger mission and discovers that something terrible has happened, together with her dog she struggles to survive and runs into Jared, a backpacker that had also been attacked and is on the run for safety. Together they have to jump into the undiscovered not knowing if they will come out alive. In this collection you can clearly see one of Anns loves, the mountains! Three different and totally amazing stories with strong characters, in fact, I have never read about one week character in Anns books and the story is always new, not the usual mainstream. All the books are well written, the plots are fantastic and they keep you hooked until the end. Absolute read recommendation. 0 von 0 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. Ive come to talk with you again a second chance at love. Von Jean Smith Alphas in the Wild is a collection of three full-length novels that are all based on relationships made on the backcountry trails, treks and climbs of the mountains. Life is immediate and survival is dangerous. Each of the three tales gives you that sense of immediacy and adventure. In Hello Darkness, Moira is forced to confront the past and forge a new future when her cheating ex decides if he cant have her then no one will. This is one Native American shaman that has done everything to corrupt the beauty of shamanism and become a man that not even his father would approve of. When his befouled magic comes up against that of an arch druid, though, his days might just be numbered because Tim will do everything in his power to save the love of his life, including calling upon the dark side of his powers. Alpine Attraction takes us to the majestic peaks of the Andes mountains where a pact with a wily god has left Tina counting her days and unable to accept the love of the only man shes ever wanted. When the two of them are reunited on the cold climes of the Andes once again, it will be a fight for their lives and their love a fight Craig is more than willing to engage in with a god if it means he gets the woman of his dreams. Sara is a happy forty-something recluse caring for her beloved mountain trails as a park ranger. When a trip up the mountain with her SARs dog has her cowering from alien spaceships shes not sure what shell discover when she leaves her hideaway. She certainly didnt expect to find the love of her life in Jared. Jared left behind the hustle and bustle of the city for a backcountry hike never expecting to find himself fleeing cross-country from the destruction wrought by aliens nor helping a bunch of NASA scientists save the world. A Run for Her Money will have you rooting for the survival of mankind and the demise of invading aliens but most of all it will have you melting at this second chance at love for Jared and Sara. Ann Gimpel once again shows she knows how to combine action, adventure, and romance. While these stories may seem so very different with their paranormal and sci-fi elements they are wonderful tales of second chance love and romance.*****Reviewed for Xtreme-Delusions*****
