EVERYTHING down and pick up ANYTHING FOR HER MARRIAGE! Von Holly FNancy Shapiro and Rod Braden have little in common. She's warm and open, he's walled his emotions off and over the years the wall has grown so thick that he's practically inaccessible. But while one night of passion doesn't breach his defenses, it does create a baby. Rod does the honorable thing and asks Nancy to marry him. Can a marriage born of necessity turn into something more? Can Nancy scale Rod's walls and reach the heart he's hidden away behind them? Karen Templeton tells a heart-warming love story with humor and insight into what makes people tick as she revisits Spruce Lake, Michigan in Anything for His Marriage. 0 von 0 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. Not the Best Romance Story Von Ein Kunde Anything for Her Marriage seems like a promising story. The theme and plot appear to be interesting but the story rambles. The author has adopted a tone of voice that I disliked. She uses the word "oy" a lot. The leading man, Rod Braden, has too much emotional baggage including two kids, an ex-wife, and a time consuming business. The leading lady, Nancy Shapiro, has too many cats and not enough going on in her life. I usually love stories like this one but Anything for Her Marriage was not for me. 0 von 0 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. supertoll Von Ein Kunde Of course the hero is stinky rich, handsome as can be and has a heart of gold. That combination sounds boring at first sight, but plus points are, he is a little older (over 40) and has two kids, who are not too fond of daddy's new flame. I loved the heroine, who is funny, even in her worst situations. Her best girl-friend, his good old doctor, her cats and his kids are wonderfully characterized, too. One of the best books I read this year! Full of love, fun and juicy moments.

Expectantly Yours Baby on the way Autorenkommentar A glass of wine, some overachieving sperm, and . . . oy. Nancy Shapiro might be a crack real estate agent, but her track record with men -- and mothers -- is from hunger. In her mother's overly critical eyes, in the eyes of every man she's ever dated, she's always come up short. So when a single glass of wine on New Year's Eve loosens her up enough to hit on Rod Braden -- a man she's secretly lusted after, off and on, for nearly four years -- she's not expecting much to come of it. Oops. Falling in love, Rod believes for a host of reasons best kept under wraps, is an invitation to tragedy. Allowing one's emotions to rule, a sign of weakness. Yet what has this philosophy gotten him? Yes, at forty-one, he has a vast fortune, a successful marketing business, and has steered clear of messy emotional involvements. But he also has a pair of failed marriages under his belt, as well as two teenaged children with whom he has no idea how to communicate. And now, thanks to a single mind-blowing encounter on New Year's Eve, another child is on the way. Even though Nancy Shapiro's gregariousness, generosity, and in-your-face honesty threaten to demolish every safeguard he's erected around his heart, logistics -- and a unshakeable sense of integrity -- decree that marrying the mother of his third child is what's best for everyone. As long as she doesn't demand his heart, he -- and his secret -- will be safe. Unfortunately, he underestimates the determination of a woman who'll do anything for her marriage. . . and for the only man who's ever given a damn about her.
