UnputdownableVon mooksbooksThis is the first book I have read by Irina Shapiro and it most definitely will not be my last. Beautifully, poignantly written, I was hooked from page one. The story draws you in and does not let you go, even after finishing the book. Wish I could give more than 5 stars. This author has joined the list of my most favourite authors.

Kurzbeschreibung When American Lexi Maxwell buys a derelict mansion in a quaint English village and sets about turning it into a manor-house hotel, its a dream come true. But, events take a turn for the bizarre, as a heartbroken ghost makes a nightly appearance and kneels beneath a tree next to a centuries-old ruin, and people in the village keep commenting on Lexis resemblance to a woman whos been dead for a quarter of a century. As Lexi tries to find out more about the man in the ruin, she unexpectedly stumbles upon secrets from her own past secrets that threaten to destroy everything shes come to believe and hold dear. As Lexi struggles to put the pieces of the puzzle together shes drawn deeper into the mystery, and can only rely on the man shes come to have deep feelings for a man whos battling his own demons.
