Another relevant book from Margaret ForsterVon MargareteA beautifully written, sensitive and well-constructed interpretation of a theme which affects many families today,as people get far older than previously and the frequency of senile dementia rises.

Kurzbeschreibung What do men run away from? Not war, not physical hardship, but the day-to-day emotional demands of impossible domestic situations. That's women's work. This is a story of female courage, where black comedy turns to disturbing pathos revolving around the rights of an indomitable woman Pressestimmen "A moving story, a condemnation of the way we treat our old friends and loves, a rage against the dying of the light" (Philip Howard The Times) "A novel painfully full of feeling, and totally credible-the passion shines through" (Isabel Quigly Financial Times) "A memorably touching story about the pressures on a family trying to do their best... A wonderfully accurate, powerful and even funny portrait" (Graham Lord Sunday Express) "It is close to life in a way we hardly expect a novel to be, and finally very moving" (Hilary Mantel Daily Telegraph) "An extremely skilful and angry novel...beautifully written" (Anita Brookner Spectator)
Werbetext 'An excellently funny, moving novel...a text for our times' Independent
