first of the Celta books from talented Robin D. Owens. There was something about this solitary man that called for his own story. I am delighted to see in this, the fourth book in the series his story, is finally realized. Straif is the only descendent of his family line, years he has mourned this loss, years he has searched for the reason why. On Planet Celta family is everything. Ancient descendent from planet Earth, they value their lines, rites and traditions, and being the head of a first family carries great honor and responsibilities. Only Straif is the last Blackthorne. His ancient family estate has stood empty, unloved as he has journeyed hard and long trying to unriddle the curse that has plagued his family, but failed to claim him. Finally coming home to Druida City, he hires Mitchella Clover to bring alive the long neglected manor house of his estate. Mitchella has the key to discovering her heartmate and is determined to find him, but Blackthorne keeps cloaking the fact he is the one, knowing he cannot marry this woman. To do so would seal the end of the Blackthorne line. As with each set of lovers in Owens very original series, the premise is there is a Heartmate for true lovers. As young men and women come of age they go through a series of three passages and if they have a heartmate they will generally glimpse this person. Straif has glimpsed a woman, but like the family that bore him, their romance is doomed. He must marry to produce heirs to carry on the Blackthorne line - heirs he hopes can survive. The woman in his visions is Mitchella Clover, a woman who cannot have children. This is very painful to her, as she comes from a very fertile family. Her lack of the ability to have children is only magnified with so many nieces and nephews around her. She longs for her own family, but knows her having suffered Macha's Disease stands between her growing love for Straif. Mitchella soon learns Straif is her heartmate but he refuses to accept her because he believes it would be the end of the Blackthorne family. There is a dark menace killing young first familiar members and as Straif tries to stop him, he fears the evil shall claim the one thing he loves - Mitchella. Of course, there is another darling FamKitty. This one is Drina. Ah, sigh, if Straif and Mitchella would just listen to the smart know-it-all Drina!! But such is the lot of a FamKitty!! Owens paints with pictures, not mere words, pulling you into her very intricate world of Celta and kitties with telepathy and the power to speak. One cannot wait for the next Celta tale.

Straif is such a tortured hero that one cannot help but feel with him.. his pain, his longing for a family. His long absence from the residence is justified.. but now he has to face his past and build his future if he wants to hold his place as first family great lord. Is the cure for the disease that killed his family and might enable him to have children finally in reach? He meets.. or is it more being met, since someone always mingles, or is it fate? .. Mitchella Clover, decorator supreme, the only one who could revive his residence to meet the councils expectations. Mitchella Clover has given up all hope to ever have children, given her being sterile. But her heart is big enough to enclose her foster son. But can she be mate to a great lord desperate for own children? Seems hardly so, or? On the other hand... why is it the residence is talking to her more clearly every day? Following the concept of sentinel houses - that live, talk and feel is truly intriguing.. and lovely. Again, Robin has brought in another completely different aspect of life on Celta. They are both gifted with flair and their gifts are interesting, him being a tracker and a fighter, her being able to talk to houses and envisioning true potentials of rooms and buildings. Beautifully written, thanks again, Robin!

Kurzbeschreibung On the planet of Celta, where psychic talents thrive and desires flourish, Straif Blackthorne is the last of his kind. After his family dies due to a genetic disorder, Straif is determined to find a cure and rebuild his heritage. Nothing else matters--until he meets Mitchella Clover. But Straif cannot give Mitchella his heart, for she is unable to bear children. Only when tragedy threatens to destroy them do they realize what truly matters, and what they truly mean to each other. From Booklist Mitchella Clover, a talented interior designer, moves in to renovate the long-deserted Blackthorn residence after Straif Blackthorn returns home to claim his heritage. The noble and the commoner are intensely attracted to each other, but she, being sterile, knows a relationship with a man who is the sole survivor of his line, the line he wants to rebuild with his own DNA, must marry someone who can give him children. With the title of the property in question, they race to rebuild before a council deadline. His spoiled cat and her teenage foster son create lots of problems for the protagonists and add depth and humor to the story. In Owens' fourth stand-alone science-fantasy romance in the award-winning Celta series, the romance is passionate, the characters engaging, and the society and setting exquisitely crafted.
