Loved it.Von Hoener, BirgitThe 2nd of Mrs Moody's Teacup Novellas I have read, and I loved it as much as the first. Again, the fictitious author who received lots of old teacups from an aunt writes a story about one of them, this time leading us to a daughter coming home to her Dad and her sister after being harrassed at work by her boss. To her surprise, her Dad has turned into a biker who is collecting other lost souls, helping them find their way again, and the way to God.

The love story developing between Tracey and one of his biker lost souls, Noah, is the main theme in this book. Heartwarming story, well developed characters, a great plot and a good narration style make this a book you will find difficult to put aside before you have reached the last page. Thank you, Diane Moody, for another very enjoyable couple of hours spent reading this book.
