Dare she love an enemy of her country?Von Jo ManningGail Eastwood writes polished Regency fiction. This story of love between enemies---the French prisoner and the English lady---is beautifully done, and explores a subject not much written about. (The only other story on love between enemies during the Napoleonic era that I am aware of--and please correct me if I'm wrong--is the long-out-of-print Robert Louis Stevenson's last novel, St. Ives.) There is a perfectly horrendous villain! You will root for his downfall --- appropriately enough, at the hands of the heroic French captain.

A good, romantic read and a good look at the historical treatment of French prisoners of war in England.

Kurzbeschreibung Accused of a crime he didnt commit, captured French officer Alexandre Valmont has risked his life and honor to escape the English war prison at Norman Cross in a desperate bid to get home and clear his name. The daughter of a baronet, Merissa Pritchard, risks charges of treason and her familys safety when she hides the wounded fugitive and tries to nurse him back to strength. Neither has counted on risking their hearts in a most dangerous game of impossible love! ers Choice Award nominee (1995) Romantic Times Charming, suspenseful and romantic are just a few of the proper adjectives for this wonderful read. This one is a keeper! This one is a keeper! Affaire de Coeur ber den Autor und weitere Mitwirkende Gail Eastwood started writing her own books at age seven. Through a variety of careers including reporter, rare books dealer, and freelance journalist, she never gave up the dream of becoming a novelist. Her first book was published in 1994 and won the Golden Leaf Award. Six more acclaimed novels followed before Gail took a 12-year break for family matters. She is now back to writing new stories and issuing new editions of her backlist. She lives in her native state of Rhode Island with her husband and two adult sons, where she also teaches writing classes and workshops. She holds a degree in Humanities/Comparative Drama and Sociology from Case Western Reserve University. Spending time with her family, indulging in Renaissance and English Country dance, and pursuing her interests in historic costuming, reading, theater, and the beach infringe on her writing time. Her favorite travel destination is, no surprise, England.
